A result-oriented practice

Although the local public procurement framework has gone through significant transformation in recent years in alignment with EU public procurement rules, it still remains rather complex and formalistic both for domestic as well as foreign entities wishing to contract with the State. As a result, successful participation in tender procedures launched in Greece is often subject to partnering with skilful and experienced lawyers who have in depth knowledge of the regulatory framework and market conditions and are able to guide their clients through the intricacies of the Greek legal system. Our public procurement & concessions practice has been involved in numerous similar procedures over the years, including landmark tenders in various sectors and has accumulated invaluable experience in guiding clients in this respect. Our practice structure both in terms of size as well as expertise means that we can successfully assist foreign and domestic entities with their participation in Greek public tenders and help them comply with the regulatory and project management aspects thereof.

Wrap-around guidance begins from evaluating a prospective tenderer scheme's capacities in view of meeting the tender requirements and defining their participation strategy and spans to all steps of the procedure until the negotiation of and final conclusion of the contract. Where required, the provision of assistance in relation to tender related disputes consists part of work. We also regularly work with other practices of our firm particularly within the context of prospective mergers, acquisitions and reorganizations, to provide guidance in relation to potential amendments during the life of public procurement contacts in the form substitution, assignment or early termination thereof.

Our clientele originates from a wide array of industries such as energy, defence, transport, waste management, healthcare and gaming. In addition, our public procurement practice often joins forces with our project development experts in advising clients in the context of major infrastructure projects, as well as of award procedures for PPP contracts. Our ensuing know-how combined with our unique internal resources means that we are able to provide integrated advice covering all stages and aspects of interaction with the state as a counterparty in procurement procedures.

We have an outstanding track record of representing domestic and foreign tenderers in a variety of award procedures for large-scale, multimillion projects in a variety of sectors and industries.
